

To the Manuscript and Book Reviewers for 2000

Thank you from the editors and staff at the American Journal of Roentgenology.

Because the manuscript reviewers help decide what passes muster at the AJR, each manuscript received by the Journal is forwarded anonymously to two knowledgeable reviewers for their opinions concerning the worthiness of papers for publication or the reviewers' suggestions for improvement or both. The Journal receives approximately 2075 manuscripts annually, of which fewer than 800 (38%) are published. Our reviewers perform this service without compensation and with no recognition except for this acknowledgment.

The dedication of our reviewers is largely responsible for the exceedingly short mean time (approximately 4 weeks) between submission of manuscripts and notification of authors about the initial editorial decision. Initial editorial decisions are reached so quickly only because reviewers agree to judge manuscripts within 2 weeks, an enormous commitment considering the extent of their other responsibilities.

And because our book reviewers concisely capture what's important in the many new books of our field, these book reviewers have been equally generous with their time, evaluating for AJR readers the growing number of books and software published each year.

It is the women and men listed below who share a major responsibility for the quality of what you see in our pages. Without the commitment of these reviewers, the AJR would be impossible to produce.

Again, our thanks,
Lee F. Rogers
